Last Saturday, Emma and her brother visited a science museum in their city. They arrived at half past ten and bought their tickets at the entrance. The museum had four floors with different exhibitions about nature, space and technology.

First, they went to the space exhibition. Emma watched a short film about the moon, while her brother tried a computer game about planets. After that, they joined a workshop and built a small paper rocket.

At lunchtime, they ate sandwiches in the museum café. In the afternoon, they visited a room with old inventions and learned how people communicated before mobile phones. Their favourite activity was a robot demonstration.

The museum closed at five o'clock. Before leaving, they bought postcards in the gift shop. Emma wants to return next month because a new exhibition about oceans is opening soon.
