A conspicuous feature of cities in many countries, in particular those of Western Europe, is that buildings and streets devastated during the war are, once peace is reinstated, rebuilt in exactly the same manner as they existed before. Enormous efforts are taken to recreate the environment with total fidelity. This reflects the extent to which ordinary people value the traditions and culture of the past. In Japanese cities, however, one sees little evidence of such respect for tradition. Tokyo presents an extreme example: it is quite common these days for the appearance of a street or quarter to change almost beyond recognition every year. In provincial cities as well, one often finds that an absence of several years has rendered a city almost unrecognizable.

61. It is emphasized in the passage that in Western Europe, in the post-war period, _____.

- A) people relished the chance to break with tradition and create a new style of city
- B) new style of architecture was favored in the bigger cities

- C) every effort was made to rebuild the cities in the pre-war style
- D) environmental concerns were usually disregarded in the reconstruction of cities
- E) most countries were still doubtful about the permanence of the peace
